ASU is measured not by whom it excludes, but rather by whom it includes and how they succeed. With initiatives to broaden participation, such as ASU Online's B.S. degree in Biology, we are creating opportunities for students who would otherwise not have access to a college education in biology. However, with these programs come the challenges of continuing to provide a high-quality education to an increased number of students. Join us as we discuss how universities are struggling with trying to be as inclusive as possible while attempting to maintain their high standards of academic rigor. Further, we ask the question of whether having elite programs - such as the Barrett Honors College- hinders the mission of inclusion and success for all students?
