An invitation to...
A conversation with
Jane Maienschein and Carolina Abboud

"Raising the Bar for Embryos in the Law"

Wednesday, September 12, 2018
Lunch anytime between 11:30 a.m. and 12:00 p.m.
12:00 p.m. Conversation Begins
LSC 202

A current Texas law requires that embryonic and fetal tissue in a medical facility be treated as “human remains” instead of “medical waste.” People have to bury or cremate any embryonic or fetal tissue removed during medical procedures. Such requirements raise questions about what society thinks of embryos and fetuses. Are they biological material? Persons? Something in between? We will discuss court cases that show different and changing biological and social understandings of embryos and fetuses.

RSVP to Reserve Lunch